Hunt Electric's Employees Earn Safety Award

Electrical Contractor named the safest electrical contractor by the Associated Builders and Contractors

Salt Lake City, Utah (March 4, 2010) - Representatives from Hunt Electric proudly accepted the Platinum STEP Award from The Associated Builders and Contractors on behalf of the nearly 300 employees that made winning this award possible. The Platinum STEP Award is widely recognized as the premiere safety award within the construction industry.

The STEP Award was created in 1989 by the ABC National Environment, Health & Safety (EH&S) to recognize ABC member companies with exceptional safety records. The Platinum level is the highest level of achievement in the STEP program. It provides ABC members with a consistent, effective tool to evaluate safety training programs by using 20 standard "key components" of safety. Each key component focuses on specific safety and training areas essential to a successful, effective safety training program.

The full service electrical contractor was presented the award during the safety award ceremony at the annual ABC safety awards dinner. Employees at Hunt Electric recently surpassed 1,200,000 safe work hours and have worked since August 32, 2007 without a lost-time injury. This means Hunt Electric operations have not had any injuries that resulted in an employee spending days away from work.

"Our employees are our greatest resource. Protecting this resource by using proactive safety awareness and as strong safety culture is a top priority at Hunt Electric," said Nathan Clark, Safety Director.

The one year accreditation provides Hunt Electric with national recognition as an "Accredited Quality Contractor," recognized nationwide in the business community and the public.
